WHERE TO LOOK FOR TRANSPORTATION INFORMATION

Transportation funding is a large and complex topic and TripSpark has compiled a list of resources to help make better sense of it. We've categorized the links by focus areas to streamline your research.

The trend right now in grant funding is to fund projects that include and benefit many stakeholders while not duplicating service. It's wise to keep track of transit funding and other industries that benefit from transit as possible partners in the future. For example, housing, transit and biking could appear to be unrelated, but all benefit from improved transit in metro regions and funding could be available from any of the partners. Keep an open mind and keep looking for great opportunities. Mobility Management is also a key phrase and focus area to keep track of as it can include many diverse partners to provide mobility options.

We'd love to hear from you if you have a great idea for a project. Early inclusion and implementation of technology in the grant or project may help move a project forward and assist partners in working together towards an achievable goal.

Please keep checking our blog site, as we'll push out additional information as it becomes available.

Funding Source List
	General Transit Industry	Federal Transit
		Federal Register
		Mass Transit Magazine
		METRO Magazine
		American Public Transportation Organization (APTA)
		National Transit Institute
		American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials
		Smart Growth America
		Transportation Research Board
	Rural and Tribal Agencies	National RTAP
		Rural Transportation
		Transit in the Parks Technical Assistance Center Newsletter (TRIPTAC)
	Transit and Specialty Organizations	Community Transportation Association of America (CTAA)
		National Center on Senior Transportation (NCST)
	Ancillary Organizations, Trends or Possible Funders	Easter Seals Project ACTION
		Office of Sustainable Housing & Communities Updates
		United We Ride
		International Parking Institute